MR. ELLYSON PRESIDES.

The State chairman, by invitation of District Chairman Day, presided over the meeting, and at the beginning made an address in which he urged an active and aggressive campaign in this district, notwithstanding the certainty of success for the Democratic ticket this year. The State chairman suggested to the county and city committeemen that they should become thoroughly familiar with the strength of the party if not for this year for next, and advised each chairman to secure a list of the qualified voters in his centry from which he should take the certain Democrates and Republicans and then go to work on the doubtful ones.

"This," said Mr. Ellyson, "was one of the first things I ever did after I entered politics when a young man. It is an excellent plan and means much."

The State chairman thought there should be from the total consequence in State chairman thought there should be from two to three meetings in every city and county between now and election, and said that if the meetings are arranged for he will see that the speakers are supplied; "but," said Mr. Ellyson, "you must be careful after I give you a man to send him an invitation yourself. This is very important."

Continuing, Mr. Ellyson said;

"You won't have any trouble in having plenies in the country; the good people, there will furnish lots to eat, and in the city all that is needed is a big hall, music and speakers." should be from two to three meetings in sic and speakers.'

VISITING SPEAKERS.

Chairman Ellyson said it was hard to get men from other Shries to come to Virginia, but that an effort is on foot to exchange Virginia speakers for Georgia, Mahaman, Tennessee and North Carolina material.

Mr. Ellyson took up the question of voting proxies in county, city and district meetings and explained that the last State Convention ruled against the voting of meetings and explained that the last State Convention ruled against the voting of proxies unless specific provision is made for the same in the meetings at which delegates to conventions and members of committees are elected. This explanation was to settle the matter of proxies which has not been fully understood.

Following this there was an interchange of ideas concerning campaign work.

Neither United States Nor Great Britain Will Let Contraband Matter Drop.

(By Associated Press.)

ST. PETERSHURG, Soptember 26.—
Neither the United States nor Great Britain has yet renewed diplomatic resolutions to Russia on the question of contraband. It is hardly believed here that either the United States or Great Britain purposes to allow the matter to rest in its present aspect. While the Washington government won a distinct victory in the decision of the commission regarding contraband, it is thought it will still refuse to acquiesce in the placing of cotton, fuel and railroad, telegraph and telephone material in the list of absolute contratand. If representations are renewed there is reason to believe that Russia may concede the point regarding cotton. (By Associated Press.)
